ORDINATION SERVICE HELD LAST SUNDAY

MR. BENJAMIN ANDRES WHO WAS CALLED TO THE MARION CHURCH LAST MARCH AND WHO WAS

Graduated From Louisville Seminary In May Was Ordained Last Sunday By the Paducah Presbytery of the PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE U. S.

The presbytery met on Saturday night at 8 o'clock to listen to a sermon preached by the candidate for ordination. The text assigned to him by the Presbytery was Rom. 8:34. Mr. Andres was commended by the Presbytery for the manner in which he treated the subject, and upon motion the Presbytery adjourned to meet the next morning to install him to preach the Gospel.

This being a called meeting only a sufficient number of the members of the Presbytery were present to constitute a quorum, which is three ministers and one elder. The ministers in attendance were Dr. T. H. Chubb, and Rev. R. E. C. Lawson, of Henderson, and Rev. Frank M. Hawley, of Paducah. The elder was Geo. M. Crider, of Marion.

The Presbytery was called to order on Sunday morning by Dr. Chubb, and after the usual preliminary service he delivered the sermon. His text was Heb. 11:1. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

The sermon was the product of a master mind; it covered the quality of Christian faith. It viewed the subject from many standpoints, showing how the patriarchs gained prominence in the history of God's people because they exercised this true faith, which is believing in the things unseen and unobtainable by reason. This faith is applied to Christ and his work of redemption. The whole plan of salvation is indiscoverable by reason, and must be believed by man. Christ redeemed the people when he told them he came from heaven; that he would give them of his flesh to eat; that God was sovereign; its because they did not have the true faith. These things are all unseen and unobtainable by reason, hence they must be known through faith.

The speaker demonstrated how faith was not a blind trust but that it was the substance of things hoped for. Substance means that which stands, under thus faith supports the Christian in his belief and keeps him steadfast in the things that pertain to eternal life. As Paul said, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep me against all day."

This sermon was appreciated by every one who heard it and it did much to strengthen the faith of the hearers.

After the sermon the candidate took the vows of the church and was ordained and installed as pastor of the Marion church.

After this ceremony the charge to the pastor was delivered by Rev. F. M. Hawley, who in a brief, eloquent and impressive remarks lay before the pastor the dignity of his office and the obligations which rested upon him.

The charge to the people was delivered by Rev. R. E. C. Lawson with a few practical suggestions before the people their duty as a church and their relation to their pastor.

The service taken all together was impressive and beautiful to those who attended.

The evening at eight o'clock

Rev. R. E. C. Lawson addressed the Union meeting which was held at the Presbyterian church. The text was 1 Sam. 17:50, "So David prevailed over the Philistine with a sling and with a stone, and smote the Philistine and slew him, but there was no sword in the hand of David." Rev. Lawson preached a very powerful sermon from this text showing how differently God does things than does man. David went out in the name of the Lord and conquered the giant with these simple weapons. His words were encouraging to Christians to be faithful to God and trust Him and use the means that he has given us. In this way we will overcome all obstacles.

Rev. Lawson is a very animated speaker and his words carry much force with them, convincing men of the truth of God's love. A large audience heard the sermon and were highly pleased as well as greatly strengthened by the minister's remarks.

The people of Marion are grateful to those men of God for the good seed they have sown and most cordially welcome their return.

OWNERS OF DOGS

Who Fail to List Them With Assessor Subject to Fine of $10.

The dog law which passed both branches of the last Legislature and became effective all over Kentucky on June 11, is quite comprehensive. The following are some of its provisions:

Every dog four months old shall be taxed.

Every person who keeps or harbors a dog on his place, or allows it to be done, shall be considered the owner. The assessor shall note the name, kind, color, size, age and sex in the assessors book.

The tax on dogs shall be kept as a separate fund and be used to pay for dogs killed by dogs.

Elaborate provisions are made for providing the loss of sheep and all claims for damages shall be acted on by the fiscal court. The owner of the dog shall be liable for damages done by his dog, but if a person is bitten upon the owner's premises, at night no damages shall be allowed.

All dogs listed for taxation shall be regarded as property and the owner may recover for all damages done to his dog.

The dog tax shall not be collectible until next year.

Every person who owns or harbors a dog and fails to list it with the assessor, shall be fined $10 for each dog, and if he fails or refuses to pay the tax he shall be fined $25 for each offense.

Any person who shall put out poison upon his own premises or elsewhere and the same may poison any dog, shall be fined from $2 to $25 or put in jail for six months, or both, at the discretion of the jury, and shall be liable for damages to the owner of the dog.

The tax is $1.00 on each and every dog.

JUDGE BARNES DIES AT DYCUSBURG

AFTER LONG AND PAINFUL ILLNESS—LEAVES WIFE AND TWO CHILDREN TO MOURN HIS DEATH.

Was Police Judge of Dycusburg But Was Forced to Resign Some Weeks Past on Account of Ill Health

MEMBER OF MASONIC FRATERNITY

Dycusburg, Ky., July 9.—On Friday, July 6, at 5:30 p. m., Judge D. F. Barnes, after a long and painful illness, expired at his home surrounded by friends and loved ones.

He was born at Union Star, Ky., March 5, 1838. He enlisted in the Federal army in company "D," of Kentucky volunteers in the late rebellion. Later in life he engaged in mercantile business in Smithland, where he has many friends. In 1894 he was married to Miss Sue W. Garrett, and two years later removed to Breckenridge, his native county, where he resided three years. From there he came to Dycusburg in which town he has since resided.

For several years his health has been failing, and for two years previous to his death he was confined to his bed.

His sufferings were great, but his faith and patience were greater, and his death was a christian triumph. He met his last enemy like a soldier and conquered. One little daughter preceded him to heaven, and his remaining and greatly bereaved family consists of his wife and two little sons, Eddie Garrett and Orville King Barnes. The Masons, that noble fraternity of which he was for many years a member, ministered at his bedside and lifted all care from his widow until his body was consigned to its last resting place on the west side of the Dycusburg cemetery.

Dr. T. L. Phillips was his constant and skillful physician, but the combined skill of himself, Dr. J. V. Hayden and Dr. J. M. Graves could not restore him, for his disease was beyond the reach of man. To these physicians and to Dycusburg Masonic Lodge, his family tenders most grateful thanks. They have truly learned the protecting, comforting influence of Masonry. Religious exercises were conducted by Rev. Robert Johnson, pastor of the Methodist church, at his home, in the presence of many sympathizing friends, and a Masonic funeral will occur at a date yet to be fixed.

Seaman-McNeely

Sunday evening at the home of the bride in East Marion, Miss Byrd McNeely, of this city, and Mr. John Seaman, of Princeton, were united in marriage by Rev. W. T. Oakley. The bride is very handsome and is quite popular in Marion society.

Mr. Seaman is a son of Mr. T. C. Seaman, of Princeton, and is at present engaged in the stove mill business at McMinnville, Tenn., where they will make their future home.

On account of the recent bereavement in the family of the bride, in the loss of her father, the ceremony was a quiet one, and was attended by only the immediate members of the family.

A Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the many friends who so willingly did all that could be done in the death and burial of our precious little one. May God's richest blessing ever attend them.

C. W. and EFFIE LOVE.

John McNeely Dead.

Last Thursday, July 5th, Mr. John McNeely, a well known citizen of this town, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Amy Menser, near Dawson, Ky. Mr. McNeely had been a sufferer from childhood with white swelling, and this, together with a case of flux, which attacked him a week ago, was the cause of his death. He was born in Caldwell county, Ky., on Jan. 29, 1840, and was married in 1860 to Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts, who survives him; 7 children blessed this union, 1 of whom died in infancy, and the 6 surviving are Mrs. Annie Menser, of Dawson, Mrs. Frank Doss of Princeton, Ky.; Misses Ella and Bird McNeely, of this city; two sons, Albert H. and Charles McNeely.

While Mr. McNeely has been a sufferer for many years with white swelling, he was not thought to be dangerously ill until a week ago and his death was a great surprise to his many friends here, where he has been well and favorably known for the past seven years, having moved here from Nashville in 1899.

He was a Cumberland Presbyterian and the Rev. Jas. F. Price officiated at the funeral and interment, which took place here Friday afternoon at the new cemetery.

An Enjoyable Evening

Mrs. H. D. Pollard entertained last Saturday evening in honor of her niece, Miss Sallie Joe McGhee, of Elkton, at her home on Bellville.

Refreshments were served throughout the evening by Mrs. C. J. Haury.

A very interesting contest was engaged in, Miss Mary Caton, of Morganfield, winning the prize—a box of Lowmy's bon-bons, and the consolation prize—a basket of cakes, was won by Clarence Gilliland.

The principal feature of the evening was fortune telling, Mrs. Lowmy being the palmist.

Delicious refreshments of ices and cake were served in the hall. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all. The guests were Misses Pearl Doss, Inez Price, Bernice and Maude Driskill, Bulah Conyer, Grace Moore, Mabel Vandell, Nelle Sutherland, Vera McCord, Willie Hale, Maude Gilliland, Ina Koon, and Mary Caton and Rudy Brinson, of Morganfield, and Ray Flanary, Creed Taylor, Clarence Gilliland, Harvey Mulhal, Kearney McCord, Gray Rochester, Sylvan Price, Emmet Koltinsky and Lottie Gilbert.

Circuit Court Adjourned

Circuit court adjourned Saturday and Judge Gordon left for his home in Madisonville the same day.

The following cases were disposed of since our last issue:

Nannie Mitchell vs H. H. King, recovery of property, judgment for plaintiff.

Martha C. Hardin vs Columbia Mining Co., damage, judgment for plaintiff.

C. Harris vs I. C. railroad, damage, judgment for plaintiff.

A. H. Reed vs Marion Zinc Co., judgment for plaintiff.

Miss Gwendolyn Haynes "Stormed."

Friday night a gay party of young folks surprised Miss Gwendolyn Haynes with a storm party, which was quite enjoyable. The little lady was quite equal to the occasion and welcomed her guests with an ease and grace worthy of one much older. Refreshments of fudge, grape juice and cake were served.

Among those who were present were Misses Jessie Croft, Madeline Jenkins, Katie Yates and Messrs. Homer and Orlin Moore, Robert Jenkins and Emmett Clifton.

MINERAL STRIKE NEAR CARRSVILLE

From the Drift of the Lead It Is Thought To be the Fairview Vein.

While digging in a cellar under the residence of Prof. C. W. Wright, near Carrsville, last week, workmen uncovered a very rich vein of fluor spar. The mineral is mixed with the clay and begins to show up not more than 4 or 5 feet from the surface. About 6 feet of the width of the vein is uncovered in the west side of the vein, and it is not known how much wider the vein is. The vein runs from N. E. to S. W., and according to late geological survey it seems reasonably certain that the Professor has struck the famous Fairview Lead.

Givens' Old "Grey" Runs Away.

Last Thursday about noon Mr. Givens' old grey horse was frightened and ran away throwing James Carloss the little delivery boy, out knocking out several of his teeth and bruising him up considerably.

James is the son of Mrs. W. T. Carloss and has been assisting Mr. Givens for some time in the meat market. Dr. Driskill is the attending physician and James is at this time improving and hopes to be out soon.

Merry Crowd Go Hay Riding.

With Miss Leatha Wilborn a jolly crowd went on a hay ride to Crittenden Springs last Friday evening. The party was composed of the following: Misses Mary Caton and Rudy Brinson, Morganfield, Mildred Haynes, Inez Price, Ellis Gray; Messrs. Ray Flanary, Jno. B. Sedberry, Trice Bennett, Fred Owen, Lottie Gilbert.

CRITTENDEN COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY

Was Entertained at the Hotel Crittenden By Dr. Frazer Tuesday Evening

The Crittenden County Medical Society were entertained at the Hotel Crittenden by Dr. T. Atchison Frazer Tuesday evening. A sumptuous repast was served which was heartily enjoyed by all present.

The Crittenden County Medical Society met Tuesday afternoon at the court house. Among the visiting physicians present were: Drs. W. H. Gilbert and M. Raydin, of Evansville, who are honorary members of the Society; and from out in the country those who attended were: Drs. J. E. Fox, of Levas; J. D. McConnell and W. U. Hodges, Shady Grove; E. E. Newcom, Repton; O. C. Cook, Crayneville; W. F. Gardner, Sheridan; W. T. Travis, Tribune.

A most interesting meeting was held. Dr. W. H. Gilbert read a paper on "Pelvic Inflammation." Dr. M. Raydin read a paper on "Obit Media."

Dr. A. J. Driskill read a paper on "Surgical Therapy."

Dr. T. A. Frazer read a paper on "Management of Typhoid Fever."

All of these papers were discussed by the entire Board, and all present entered into the discussions.

The city physicians who attended were Drs. T. A. Frazer, J. W. Trisler, A. J. Driskill, and W. T. Daughtrey. The Society adjourned to meet at their regular date, 3 months hence.

A Juvenile Entertainment.

In honor of Mary Lambert and Rebecca Crowell, of Henderson, Anna Cox entertained a few of her little friends Wednesday evening, July 4, from 5 to 8 on the lawn at her residence on Walker street.

Every thing was given a touch of red, white and blue suggestive of the day. The first game played was similar to the game of "nine pins." Fire-crackers were arranged at one end of the room and from the opposite end each player rolled a ball aiming to knock over the fire crackers. Ruth Flanary knocked over the greatest number and won the first prize, Emma James won the consolation prize. Luncheon was served on the lawn and a splendid time was reported by the crowd of little girls.

Bids Wanted.

Sealed bids will be received for construction of a brick church in Smithland, Ky., until August 1st, '06, plans by architect shown on application. Brick and stone on lot, foundation ready. Smithland, Ky. Chas. Rutter, W. I. Clarke, C. H. Wilson, Building Committee.

Home Coming Meeting.

On Wednesday, July 18, 1906, at Siloam church there will be a home coming meeting and everyone is invited to come and bring well filled baskets. Protracted meeting will begin on next Monday night.

WRECK AT BLACKFORD

Five Freight Cars Were Derailed—Conductor Hughes Was Badly Injured.

Freight train No. 302 on the Illinois Central railroad north-bound was wrecked about two miles below Blackford Sunday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock.

Five freight cars were turned over and badly wrecked but luckily, the engine did not leave the track. The caboose did not fare as well as the engine and left the track and Conductor Hughes, of Evansville who was in the caboose at the time, was slightly injured internally. He was taken to his home last night and it is not thought that he will be compelled to keep to his room more than a few days.

Spreading rails are supposed to have caused the wreck. The tracks were cleared shortly after the accident and traffic was not delayed but a very short time.

A Correction

Sikeston, Mo., July 5.—Editor Press: It is through your valuable paper that we wish to inform some few of the people in Crittenden that are blowing their heads off about our being down here in jail, that we are not in jail or under bond and never have been. We had nothing to do with the working of the negroes as some have told. They are mistaken. And we kindly ask them that the next time they tell we are in jail to know what they are talking about.

Missing Egg Found in Snake.

Charles Mathes, a farmer near Fredericksburg, Ind., twenty-five miles north of New Albany, has an artificial hen egg which he extracted from a large cow snake.

For some time Mr. Mathes had been annoyed by something stealing eggs from his barn, and on one occasion not only all the eggs in the nest were stolen but an artificial egg that had been used as a nest egg was also missing. The following day Mr. Mathes killed near his barn a large cow snake, measuring six feet in length and he discovered inside the snake a hard round substance. Cutting the reptile open with his knife he found the missing egg.—Herald.

J. B. M'CREARY ENTERS RACE FOR SENATOR

He Announces His Candidacy Over His Own Signature

TO THE DEMOCRATS OF KENTUCKY.

I have in various newspaper interviews declared my candidacy for United States Senator and I now, over my own signature, submit to you my candidacy for the nomination of United States Senator, according to the plan announced by the Democratic Executive committee of Kentucky.

For the honor conferred upon me in 1902 when I was elected United States Senator, I am sincerely grateful. I have tried to be faithful and efficient, and the manner in which I have discharged my official duties, I leave to the unprejudiced judgment of the people of Kentucky.

I have always been in favor of primary elections, fairly and honestly held, and I have always been opposed to bossism or machine rule. When I was first a candidate for United States Senator the other candidates were self-agreed to a primary election to be held two months before the election of United States Senator by the General Assembly, but the State Democratic committee, not feeling it for the best interest of the Democratic party and refused to order a primary election.

The proposed primary election is ordered to be held many months earlier than any primary election to nominate either State Officers or United States Senator has ever held in Kentucky, or in any other state. For many years primaries or conventions in our state to nominate candidates for state offices have been held in May or June of the year in which the candidates nominated were to be voted for at the November election, and it has been heretofore believed that said primaries should not occur when presidential or congressional elections are held, so that national and state issues would be separated.

The primary election, ordered to be held on the 6th of November will occur on the regular election day when Representatives in Congress will be elected, and this primary election was called eighteen months before the election of United States Senator by the General Assembly and two years and four months before a Senator-elect can take his seat in the United States Senate, and candidates for state offices will be nominated twelve months before they can be elected, and the call for a primary to nominate them so early is in violation of the rule adopted by the Democrats at the last state convention in 1904.

The success of the Democratic party should be paramount to the success of any individual, and the governing authorities of the Democratic party should act for the benefit of the whole Democratic Party and not for the benefit of a few Democrats.

The outlook for Democratic victory in the next national election is brighter than it has been in years, and becoming more favorable every day. Kentucky Democrats must give no aid to "rule or ruin" policies, but uphold wise and just policies, that will keep Kentucky in the Democratic column, with an increased Democratic majority.

I have perfect confidence in the Democrats of Kentucky, and I willingly and gladly submit to their judgment and their action my aspiration for a second term in the United States Senate.

I have always been a faithful, loyal Democrat, and I have worked and made speeches in every campaign in our state for thirty years, and I have always when in office given all of my time to the faithful discharge of my charge of my duties, and when our state had been republican several years, and I was requested by the Democratic authorities to take charge of the campaign in 1900, I managed the campaign, visited many counties in the state, and organized and made many speeches, and with the aid of my brother Democrats we redeemed the state from the republican rule and gave a majority to our candidate for Governor and our candidate for President.

Precedents are not lacking in Kentucky for giving to her Senators, whose services have proven satisfactory, second and even third terms, and as Democrats have not objected to or criticized my record I am asking an endorsement.

Legislation on important questions and the great issues now before our country, concern the welfare of the people more than ever before and I trust my experience and my investigation make me better equipped for faithful and efficient discharge of my duties if I am elected.

The Democratic majority in Kentucky is small when both political parties vote their full strength. Our majorities in recent years, as compared with those twenty-five years ago, are a result of the necessity of earnest and united party action. Every Democrat who participates in the primary election should endeavor to contribute to the party and improve its prospects for victory at the regular election by securing the campaign through a high and honorable place, and by seeing that every candidate has justice and fair play, and that an honest primary is held and every vote counted and cast.

Respectfully,
J. B. M'CREARY
Richmond, Ky., June 25, 1906.

Modest Claims Often Carry the Most Conviction.

When Shavin, the famous gun inventor, placed his gun before a committee of judges, he stated its carrying power to be much below what he had said the gun would accomplish. The result of the trial was, therefore, a great surprise, instead of disappointment. It is the same with the many claims of Chamberlains' Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. They do not publicly boast of all this remedy will accomplish, but prefer to let the users make the statements. What they do claim, is that it will positively cure cholera, dysentery, pains in the stomach and bowels and has never been known to fail. For sale by Woods & Orme.

A Mysterious Box.

A few days ago a small, curious-looking box of peculiar shape came to the express office and remains there yet. The box is of Oriental design and about two feet square. There are silvery looking hinges on it, but the lock is on the inside. Several times since it came to the office a curious noise, with restless hums, have come from the inside, which indicates without a doubt that it contains some strange animal. Leo Tibbs has been tempted to look holes in the box, but as the wood is of a costly material resembling mahogany he has refrained from doing so. The door of the office is eagerly watched each day for the appearance of the owner, but so far he has failed to show up, and the box or case remains there, a mystery.

JOHN ROBINSON'S

Ten Big Combined Shows to Exhibit in Princeton July 19th.

Indications are that a large crowd will attend from here. Very low excursion rates will be in effect on all railroads.

The show under the management of John Robinson, is now enjoying its eighty-third year of prosperity, and is one of the foremost amusement attractions of America if not of the world.

It numbers among its favorite favorites some of the most expensive and best acts that money can procure. The Capt. Thomson troupe of American cavalrymen, in expert feats of riding and original horsemanship. Pare Plant McBurny, who sets at a defiance all the laws of nature when he dashes down a dizzy incline, and with the speed of a lightning bolt, the hand of Capt. Wagon, Edna, a well-known Princess of the realm of horse ownership, the world's only circusmaster, and twenty other great attractions. John Robinson's show is a great success in this place and is a great stage, and is a great success in this place and is a great stage, and is a great success in this place and is a great stage.

The Robinson Show has always been famed for its music, and this season finds the music and the most complete orchestra, a ten-piece band, comprising violin and piano, and a large number of other instruments. This splendid array of musical talent will be seen in the big daily street parade, pronounced by all as the most gorgeous and elaborate pageant of modern times, comprising more than a mile of gold-cased wagons, chariots, and 500 of the finest of American horses. This is the only big show that is held in the trust and maintenance of the prize will be made. At Princeton, Ky., Thursday July 19, 1906.

A Modern Miracle.

Truly marvellous seemed the recovery of Mrs. Hott of this place, writes J. H. Hooper, Woodford, Tenn. "She was so wasted by coughing up pus from her lungs. Doctors declared her so near that her family had watched her for forty-eight hours when at my urgent request Dr. King's New Life Pills was given her, with the astonishing result that improvement began and continued until she finally, completely recovered and is a healthy woman to day. Guaranteed cure for coughs and colds. 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Woods & Orme Druggist."

Mrs. Olive Clark

Again God has called and obedient to the summons, Olive Clark accompanied the heavenly visitant to the eternal beyond.

She was the daughter of J. T. and Elizabeth Kemp, and was born August 8, 1878. She was married to O. L. Clark, Dec. 21, 1900, and departed this life June 4, 1906.

She was prevailed on in her youthful days to make a profession of religion and joined the C. P. church at Fredonia. But later in life she realized she did not truly experience, and heartily religion as she thought. Christmas did. But in her last days, eight or ten months before her death she was convicted of sin, and her last condition, and her conversion was such that she found no rest and some time in December, 1905, when the Lord, her Saviour, revealed himself unto her and showed her the way of life, the straight and narrow way which leads to God and to Glory. After she had realized her sins for given and the love of God shed abroad in her heart, all fear and dread of death was removed, and she was willing to die.

She had two sweet little children, darlings of her own bosom. She said she hated to leave them, but said the Lord would provide a way for them.

It is a great comfort to her husband and parents and all to have the assurance that dear Olive is saved in heaven. All is well with her.

Her funeral took place at 4 o'clock Tuesday evening, June 5th at Pleasant Hill church, conducted by J. R. Clark and J. A. Hunt after which her body was laid away in the tomb. J. R. CLARK.

More Business.

Mr. Geo. P. Roberts, of Marion, Ky., has been here for some time loading some spar at the incline. This mineral product is mined at Carversville, Ky., and Roselair, Ill., and shipped by river in barges to this city and is then loaded on the cars and shipped to Marion. At Marion the spar is ground, cleaned and prepared for shipment to eastern cities. This is a comparatively new business for the incline tracks and is a help to our city, as it gives employment to several laborers in loading the cars. Uniontown Telegram.

Regulating License Law

A new proposed law regarding June 21 requires licensees to pay for the privilege of selling liquor to private individuals. It is a measure to supply to private individuals the same rights of selling liquor as the licensed salaried ones who sell liquor to the public.

Governor's office says that per capita licensees of those who take out a special license to sell liquor to private individuals, will be permitted to furnish certified statements. Under the new amendments the prosecution of offenders will be comparatively easy.

Struck It Rich.

Chicago, July 4. Miss Theodore Savage is on her way to her new home in Hammond with new riches gained through a lucky gold strike by her brother at the new mining town of Winder, Nevada.

The young woman was a saleswoman at a ribbon counter in Spokane, Washington, until a few months ago. She struck her brother, L. A. Savage, to the amount of her earnings, one hundred dollars, when he was in a hospital in Spokane, and on a prospecting tour after his recovery. Savage became lost in a storm in Nevada. He found a place where high noon had buried a gold deposit of immense and as yet untold value. He claimed the site and the mine of Winder sprang up, starting a gold fever. Now, as a result of the strike, Miss Savage has fifty thousand dollars in cash and a sixth interest in her brother's claim.

Overdue Steamer Arrives.

Hamilton, Bermuda, July 1.—The overdue steamer America reached St. George today in tow of the steamer Dinamore, which picked her up with machinery disabled off the Azores Islands June 27. The America broke a shaft June 16 and drifted about until picked up by the Dinamore. The passengers behaved well, but complained of the food and water.

MRS. G. W. ROBINSON ASSISTS
HER HUSBAND IN DARING
OCEAN RACE.*Twenty-Eight Foot Yacht Braves
Dangers of Gulf Stream and Treacherous
Waves Off Cape Hatteras—
Winner Received $500 Lipton Cup.

After a daring ocean race of 650 miles, the sloop Gauntlet, with Mrs. Thora Lund Robinson at the wheel, finished second in the contest for which Sir Thomas Lipton offered a $500 cup. The course of the race extended from Gravesend Bay, New York Harbor, to Bermuda. Mrs. Robinson is the two months' bride of George W. Robinson, the owner of the boat. It was a daring race for each of the three small yachts that competed, but more so for the Gauntlet, because she was the smallest of them all, being only 28 feet long from bow to stern. The yawl Tamerlane, which won the cup, was 40 feet long and the yawl Lila, 39 feet. All of the craft belong to the Brooklyn Yacht Club. For eight days these tiny boats were at the mercy of wind and wave, so much so that the yawl Lila was compelled to put into Norfolk harbor to save itself from destruction while the smaller yacht bravely stuck to its task. They had to cross the gulf stream 150 miles off Hatteras, one of the stormiest spots on the Atlantic. Experienced yachtsmen were much surprised that the little Gauntlet was not wrecked or foundered somewhere on the way.

OUT TWENTY YEARS OLD.

Mrs. Robinson is only 20 years old but ever since childhood she has been used to boating and swimming. For several seasons she has sailed an eight-foot boat, making her summer headquarters near Annapolis, on the lower New York bay. Though small, she is athletic and skilled in handling a craft and is said to be without fear on the water. Storm or sunshine is all the same to her.

"One of the conditions of our marriage on April 17th," said Mrs. Robinson before starting in the race, "was that I should go in this contest. George tried to dissuade me a few days before we were married, but I made him keep his promise. Although I am rated as the chief mate and bottle washer, if you will, of the Gauntlet, I have an idea that I may superintend things before I get through."

"Yachting is not new to me. I sail of a knockabout for years in the lower bay. I learned to swim because I was captivated so many times that I had to learn."

"Mr. Robinson and myself are to stand watch together while J. L. Dunlap and H. Higgins, the remainder of the Corinthian crew, will alternate in keeping watch. Steer? Why you don't suppose I'm going to be a passenger? I can, and am going to do everything that a good navigator must do."

Professional sailors stood against at the courage of the Corinthian tars in undertaking such a perilous voyage. Disaster was predicted from the first. The yawl Lila lost her mast and sank shortly after the start outside Sandy proposed to accompany the yacht, and it was with consternation that the regatta committee learned that she meant to go. Refusal to permit her to start, threatened to disqualify the boat, and all appeals were in vain. At last the committee yielded and permitted her to start.

The Tamerlane finished the course at Hamilton, Bermuda, at 3 o'clock June 3rd, while the Gauntlet did not arrive until 24 hours later. The result was in doubt until the finish of this tiny boat, as the Tamerlane had to allow it 16 hours and 10 minutes owing to the difference in their length.

Thomas Jefferson's Bible.

The Jefferson Bible, with its beautiful red Morocco binding, made no little trouble in the House while it was a single forgotten volume reposing under lock and key at the Smithsonian Institution. Now that it has been photographed and reproduced in numerous copies, the little volume has multiplied its popularity. Hardly a man of the fifty but has had thousands of requests for the book, and more are coming in by every mail.

It seems that some enterprising business man advertised the Jefferson Bible prominently in a well-known magazine. He announced that it could be had for nothing if one would write to one's Senator or Member of Congress, concluding his advertisement with the further statement that he had come to considerable expense in having the advertisement printed, and hoped readers would turn to his business announcement on another page.

So it is that requests are rolling in upon Senators especially, for the public seems to have taken the idea that they are more legitimate prey than Congressmen at the other end of the Capitol. Each Senator's quota is but thirty copies and the only good way out of the dilemma appears to be to print more, just as Congress has done with the horse book and other popular Government publications. Better send for one before the second reprint is all distributed.

Who For Next President?

From American Spectator.

At considerable expense American Spectator has obtained opinions and expressions of the same from all of the prominent candidates for Presidential nomination. These are all unguarded, having come to us over our own private line, the least longest wire in the world. The pithy, epigrammatic sounding up will, of course, be thoroughly appreciated. The following terse expressions are in answer to our query, "Will you be a candidate?"

Taft—My candidacy is a weighty problem, and there is a heavy responsibility attached.

Cannon—I will if I do.

Bryan—The third is the lucky trial. I shall not get out of communication with my friends.

Shaw—I have always universally considered myself a strong candidate.

Hobson—Of course, it is an office of limited responsibilities—but—

Fairbanks—You'll really have to ask Mrs. F.

Huntton—Am too busy to think of it, but they do say I was born in Ohio.

Foraker—I may have to do it just

RUSS BANQUETS JAP.

BARON ROSEN ENTERTAINS THE FIRST JAPANESE AMBASSADOR
TO AMERICA.*Cordial Diplomatic Relations Established Following Bloodiest War in Modern History—Count Aoki the Guest of Honor.

That social ceremonies follow peace conferences was demonstrated the other evening at Washington, when the Russian Ambassador and Baroness Rosen gave a dinner to the Japanese Ambassador and Viscountess Aoki.

While the historic Portsmouth Peace Conference was concluded many months ago, and, politically, Japan and Russia then resumed diplomatic relations so abruptly terminated at the commencement of the Russo-Japanese war, this function marks the resumption of social intercourse between the representatives of these great nations.

Although Viscount Aoki only arrived in Washington a few weeks ago, considerable interest has since been manifested in the personal relationship

Jurgis laughed at the discontent everywhere manifest. "They are not men," he exclaimed. "What of the 'speeding up' practice of the packers? It was but play to him to keep abreast of the fastest. He was working to weed Ona. They were all cheated shamelessly by the sharks which infest the great packing district; they could not speak English and they were at the mercy of these parasites. But as new obligations arose in the buying of a small, worthless house, sold them by an unscrupulous agent, etc., etc., Jurgis but smiled grimly, confident in his strength, energy and great love for Ona. "I will work the harder," he says. And then came a misfortune. Ona, a mere bloom of a girl of 17, had to go to work—temporarily. Then a younger child. Then Jurgis had a fateful day, after many months of faithful and heroic service for the great corporation. In the midst of a wounded steer running amuck, he slipped on the bloody floor and sprained his ankle. Did the packers give him a short furlough with pay while he was recovering? At least they held his place for him? Neither. He returned to work, not very strong looking through pain that would exist between the representatives of conqueror and vanquished.

The high art of diplomacy, that so well masks the innermost thoughts of those who rise to the heights of an ambassador, doubtless viewed the social intercourse between Baron Rosen and Viscount Aoki as most natural. But to the uninitiated the part of the host taken by one—Baron Rosen—who acted as Russia's peace envoy, lent peculiar glamour to the occasion.

The treaty of peace between Japan and Russia marked the close of one of the bloodiest wars of history. The dinner given by Baron Rosen in honor of the representative of the victorious Japan goes farther, in that it takes up social intercourse upon a plane exactly as though war had never been waged.

Those who were present at this most interesting social function were the Minister from the Netherlands and Mme. van Swinderen, the Counselor of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Miyoko, Count and Countess Seckendorff, Baroness Elizabeth Rosen, the charge d'affaires of Spain, Senor Don Luis Pastor; Baron Schlippenbach, and Prince Koudacheff, of the Russian Embassy.

THE JUNGLE.

Mr. Sinclair's Story of the Awful
Methods of the Beef Packers.

No more powerful or terrible book has been written in recent years than "The Jungle," by Upton Sinclair. It seems incredible that such depth of human misery as the author relates could be permitted even by the most callous money maker or the most soulless corporation; or, on the other hand, that such villainous and filthy in the preparation of human food could be permitted; yet most of Mr. Sinclair's statements are from personal knowledge and observation, visiting the great packing plants, as he did mostly in disguise. Moreover, his statements have been abundantly corroborated by President Roosevelt's special commission, whose confidential report, containing descriptions of degradation, filth and food pollution, is too vile to print in a newspaper.

The hero of THE JUNGLE is Jurgis, a great, broad-shouldered Lithuanian who gloried in work, for the mere sake of it, even if he had had no incentive. In the far forests of Lithuania, where he and his father had lived all their lives, children of nature, Jurgis had heard of free America, and that as much as $10 a week was to be earned by a willing laboring man. In the great city of Chicago. And after many arguments and much discussion, he had prevailed upon his father, and Ona the sweet Lithuanian lass to whom he was betrothed, and her mother and several children and relatives, to emigrate to splendid America, where a man may not always remain a peasant, but where he has a chance to improve himself and rise in the world. Ten dollars a week was an unheard-of fortune. The peasants of Europe make a few cents a day.

So they all went to Packingtown, and the first day that Jurgis stood in line, being altogether the finest specimen of a man in the yards, he was beckoned to by the boss and given a job. He went home jubilant. Two other members of the family, one a great strapping woman, also got jobs at once and worry, the boss sized him up at a glance and there was no work for him in Packingtown, and Ona, whom he had married meantime was about to become a mother.

Then is recited in THE JUNGLE, a tale of gradual and heart-rending downfall in the wearing out by inches, of a strong man. Jurgis gets a job in a terrible fertilizer works where his head nearly splits with the poisonous dust and the stifling fumes of ammonia. His father dies from the effects of the awful "speeding up" and the slimy wet in which he has to work, ankle deep. Ona, the beautiful, the once little young bride succumbs to the hateful "System" and Jurgis, powerful man that he is, his strong spirit broken by the brutality and irresistible power of the bosses, becomes a great gaunt, hollow-eyed ghost of his former self.

The story is a tale of the gradual extermination of a splendid, virile European family, ground to death by a "System," by a pitiless monopoly, which cares no more or not as much for its workers than it does for the carcasses of the animals it converts into food. Incidentally the description of this process is sufficiently revolting to turn the stomach of the stoutest beefsteak.

Oh! could Jurgis, and Ona, and the rest of them, with their frugality and their brawn, and their love of life and work, and joy of a home, have gone into some rural district to work out their salvation, what a different story would have been THE JUNGLE. Some other name for the book would have been necessary. What if they could have gotten a dozen acres, or five acres of good land somewhere and bought it for what they squandered uselessly for their house in Packingtown—they were turned out and the house resold the first month they failed of payment—what a different history would have been told by the author!

What if the great packing trust, instead of killing men and women, should provide that its employees could live on an acre of ground each, or a half acre, out on the great fertile prairies of Illinois, quickly reached from the stock yards by a modern trolley, so that when they were of necessity, perhaps, "laid off" for a period of a week, or six weeks, or on "half time" they would have a piece of rich land which they could till and raise enough potatoes and corn and beans and cabbage to keep them from starving to death. But the packing trust—Mr. Ogden Armour and other millionaires and multi-millionaires—would make less money; it would decrease its dividends perhaps several per cent., and that is not to be thought of. By getting the best out of a man, all there is in him in a few short years, this unnamable Thing can turn him out and get new blood. It is evidently most profitable to "speed a man up" to the wrecking point and then get new men. This process of trafficking in human life, coupled with the abominable and poisonous adulterations and use of diseased animals which Mr. Sinclair describes at first hand, enables Mr. Armour and the others to make very satisfactory percentages of profit—to pile up millions of dividends a year.

It is all a very great story. THE JUNGLE is not a beautiful one, and well worth the reading, simply that the reader may learn something about the stuff we eat, and at what cost of suffering it is produced.

BACK TO NAPOLI.

STORY OF A FRAGMENT OF REAL LIFE AS PORTRAYED IN A
NEW STAGE PLAY.*Showing the Operations of the Immigration Law as it Affects Those Who Attempt to Enter the American Portals.

An hour at Ellis Island in New York harbor, is full of smiles and tears. The newly arrived immigrant, before he has changed his native garb, with his outlandish boxes and bundles still about him, is eternally interesting. His meetings and partings are full of a childish exuberance and abandon. He is never so picturesque or so pathetic as when he has just doubtfully trusted himself to the great machinery of a new land and law.

He hasn't been much on the stage—this immigrant—but a fragment of his life finds its way there in a one-act play called "The Land of the Free," by W. C. De Mille, which was seen recently at a Vassar Aid Society matinee. It is described by the Times as a simple little story, one that happens day after day.

In a room of the big Immigration building, with its desk and its blue-coated official, an Italian workman walks excitedly up and down. His clothes are cheap and poor, but they are plainly not his working garb, and a bright holiday handkerchief is knotted about his throat. His eyes are keen and expectant. Evidently it is a great day for him. It needs little encouragement from the good-natured officer to bring out the whole story.

A big Mediterranean steamer is just landing its steerage passengers. Luigi, as he peers through the gates at the incoming crowd, is almost beside himself with delight.

"I waita three year," he explains, breathlessly. "I worka verra hard and I save da money to bring to me my Maria and my two little ones."

He can hardly wait for the gate to be opened. But the officer has more to find out. His questioning brings out further details. Luigi earns $9 a week—with his pick and shovel. The wife is not strong. She speaks a little English. The officer looks doubtful, but says nothing.

Then all at once the boat is in. The Italian catches a sight of them through the gates.

"Na, na, Signore, she comea last. She getta lame back and two baby. Ah—Dio! Maybe she missa da boat—Ah! Vedete Maria mila Ecco—Vedete ecco—Ah mila moglie—ecco!"

In another instant, the frail little wife, in her Neapolitan costume, and the two children, with their bags and bundles, are all in their father's arms, while the officer goes off to make his report.

With her head on her husband's shoulder, Maria breathes in Italian: "Ah, my husband! I see you again, thank God!"

To which the Americanized Luigi responds:

"Si, si, carissima, but now talka English. We all good Americans and we live in Mulberry street. I gotta da little room for my Maria an' Fabio an' Tessa."

Maria marvels at Luigi's great salary—45 lire—until Luigi is forced to explain:

"Yes, yes; in Neapoli it is 45 lire, but in New York it is only $9, not so much."

Then in quick, excited phrase he draws rosy pictures of a future in which peanut stands and prosperity walk hand in hand.

Presently the officer returns. He draws Luigi aside. His face is kind, but his words are terrible. It appears that the little wife does not come up to the requirements. She is not healthy. She has no money, and Luigi has only that $9 a week. It is not enough to support a family. The wife must go back to Naples. It is hard to make Luigi understand. Maria, hearing nothing, plays happily with the children.

dren. The poor husband is stunned. "Napoli! She go back to Napoli! No, no. Ah, Dio Mio! You don't understand," he goes on, wistfully. "I work three year an' I save da money to bring her to me. Your boss he can'ta send her back—we live all right on nine dollar week. I take her away. You letta me go—eh?"

"It's hard on you," says the officer, "but it's the law."

Luigi scorns the notion. "Law? You take my wife away; you senda my little boy and girl back to Napoli, an' you say it is da law. Na, na. America is a free country. I pay for her to come to me. I don't steal, so whata da law got to say?"

But threats, tears, reasonings are all in vain. Luigi at last stealthily offers the blue-coated official $7, his all, wrapped up in a handkerchief, as a bribe. The officer frowns and says firmly:

"I cannot. I didn't make the law. I can't help you. We have to do this every day."

"Every day?" Luigi's eyes grow wide with pain. "You do this every day? Ah, Dio! Every day you breaka da heart!"

Then he goes to Maria, takes her in his arms, and explains brokenly what it all means.

"They will not letta you stay—Maria mila—we have waita long—we musta stilla waita."

In the face of her tearful dismay he even tries to be cheerful.

"Say, looka here," he cries; "you goa back to Napoli now, an' bimbebye I getta da more money. I make maybe twelve—fifteen dollar week. Then I senda for you an' Fabio an' Tessa, an' they letta you stay."

But Maria is overcome.

"Back to Napoli? Alone?" she sobs.

A sudden thought comes to Luigi. "No, no; not alone. I goa too. If they senda you, I goa too."

He rushes over to the officer with his poor seven silver dollars, only to be met with the cruel truth, "Not half enough for your ticket."

Meanwhile the boat is returning. The officer lays his hand kindly on Maria's shoulder. The children look wonderingly on. Painfully the little trio pick up their bundles and turn back to the great gates. Luigi embraces them between his sobs.

"Don'ta cry, carissima; don'ta cry—I soon make twelve, fifteen dollar week and buya da peanut stand, an' I keep da little home. Then you come again to stay. Don'ta cry—you goa to the Mader in Napoli. Ah, Dio! We have waita three year an' I must senda you back. Maybe next year I send for you again."

As they pass out of his sight his voice falls him and he falls sobbing against the gate.

The author is said to have got his idea for the piece from a newspaper paragraph read at the breakfast table describing in three lines a case of the sort.

Robert Paton Gibbs, who played Luigi, studied his type with the help of a Neapolitan who has been long enough away from home to know the salient characteristics of his own people. The extra woman, who fit so well into the picture are caretakers of the Hudson theater.

"We used to rehearse the piece every now and then down in the coal cellar," explained Mr. Gibbs, "and these two women used to come and weep over it."

and, and had to put back for a new one, which was immediately prepared to submit her to return the following day. The Tamerlane's navigator, seeing the Lila's plight, decided that it would be an unfair advantage to continue in the race, and she, too, put back. The people of the Lila, Gauntlet, did not see the accident to the Lila, it was supposed, for the sloop kept right on her smashing trip to Bermuda. The three yachts that contemplated the trip lay at anchor off the Brooklyn dock all morning, with their own crew busy at work preparing them for their severe test. On board the Gauntlet, Mrs. Thora Lund Robinson was as busy as the rest making repairs about the boat. The day before the race no one seriously her statement that she

TO BREED RESISTANT PLANTS.

Crops, Proof Against Insects or Disease Can Be Grown by the Farmer.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

The farmer's too greatest foes are insects and plant diseases. He can, by a proper rotation of crops and fertilization, convert a poor into a rich soil, and he can stimulate plant growth by plenty of fertilization. By the same process he can keep down the weeds which rob his crops of nourishment and moisture. He can, to a great extent, overcome, with but little trouble, all the various smaller blights to crop growing—all but the blight and the blight. These twain are hard to handle. None is so arrogant as to profess indifference to their attacks. Not many years ago they were expected, not the less dreaded, especially the blights and the rots and the mildews; they were the natural visitations of providence. There was no use trying to combat them. If they came, they came. The farmer prayed that they might not come that year. Now, science has shown us that they can, in most cases, be overcome. If not overcome, they can be prevented. Yet the process is often fraught with great trouble and expense to the farmer.

Now suppose a man could develop a strain of plants so hardy that blights and rust would pass them by in disgust and so bitter and powerful for a bug that the harm of the coleoptera and the other "beasts of the insect tribe" would pass by and prefer to eat oak and hickory leaves. It would be a cinch for that man, would it not? He could sit in the shade and hire myrmidons to do his work, directing those close at hand in person and those at a distance by telephone. Such a condition may be possible. The man who gets in first would be the one to sit in the shade and reap the advantage. Eventually we would all get on to the scheme, and unless the population of the world increased with accelerated rapidity, there would be an overproduction of food products and prices would eventually get back to their present level, so that we would all have to work again.

The Department of Agriculture and some of the experiment stations have been working along this line of selecting resistant plants with the idea of at least giving the enterprising American farmer a good big start.

In the aggregate enormous crop losses—millions and millions—are caused by the attacks of insects and plant diseases. In dry weather insects are particularly abundant, and in wet weather plant diseases flourish.

lish, while in average weather both do the best they can to gather the crop ahead of the farmer. Many plant diseases and insects can be controlled by the various poisons, sprays, and cultural methods already discovered, but for some—as, for example, the rust of wheat, peach yellows, clover-seed fly, etc.—satisfactory remedies have not yet been discovered.

Some instances may be cited to show just what is meant by resistant or immune varieties and their value. Grapes furnish a striking example. European grapes planted in this country fall wherever the American grape-rot louse is present, because the louse is able to attack and destroy the roots of these varieties. The roots of a native American grape are also attacked by the same louse, but are so hard and wiry that the louse can not destroy them. In other words they are resistant.

The unusual resistance of the Kiefer pear to blight has made it possible to grow this pear in the Southern States, where most other varieties fall because of blight. The variety of cowpea known as Little Iron has proved so resistant to wilt disease that in some fields it has survived when all other varieties have been killed. American gooseberries are but little subject to the mildew which seriously affects the larger English varieties when grown here. With nearly every crop grown, some of its varieties are more resistant or immune to some disease or insect attack than others.

Some varieties of the same plant are but little affected by a disease, while others are badly injured. Variations in this respect also extend to individual plants of a given variety. These facts have been utilized to some extent in the origination of the various so-called "disease-proof" varieties which have been introduced into culture—as, for example, the "rust-proof" varieties of wheat, oats, etc. As a rule, however, these varieties have not been developed by any systematic, scientific methods of selection and breeding, and although a few show merit, most of them have not measured up to the claims made for them. They have, however, served a very useful purpose in turning the thought of scientific and practical men as well, in the direction of the development of disease-resistant varieties with results which promise to prove of great practical utility.

POTATOES.
During recent years the disease resistance of potatoes especially has received attention by several of the agricultural experiment stations in the United States, notably those of Maine, Minnesota, and Vermont. A recent bulletin of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, prepared by L. R. Jones, of the Vermont Station, summarizes and discusses this work, and that along similar lines abroad, as well as the experience of practical growers. Summarizing the results, Professor Jones draws the following tentative conclusions:

Disease resistance in potatoes is relative, not absolute; no variety known being wholly proof against late blight and rot. It seems related to general vegetative vigor, and is, therefore, a measure dependent upon soil and developmental conditions.

Early varieties may escape the disease by maturing before it becomes epidemic, but when similarly exposed they are, as a class, less resistant than late varieties.

The source of seed tubers is a matter of importance, northern-grown seed giving plants the superior disease resistance in Europe. Seed from a crop that was not too highly fertilized is probably preferable. Possibly tubers are better for seed purposes if dug before they reach full maturity. High fertilization, especially with nitrogenous manures, lowers the power of the plant to resist both blight and rot.

So far as skin characteristics are an index, the red varieties with thick and rough skin seem more resistant as a class than the thin-skinned white varieties. So far as stem and foliage characters are concerned, the evidence favors the stem that is hard, rough, and rather woody at the base, and the leaf that is small, somewhat rough, and dark colored.

In America trials as to disease resistance have been conducted at some of the experiment stations, notably in smooth, flabby leaves and decumbent stems.

The evidence at hand seems to justify the hope that the combined efforts of potato specialists working from both the practical and the scientific standpoints may soon result in the development of varieties of potatoes combining general excellence with a high degree of disease resistance.

CANTALOUPE.

A recent bulletin of the Colorado Station reports the discovery by a local grower of a rust-resistant cantaloupe which promises to be of immense value to the Rockyford cantaloupe industry. In this case seed of the Rockyford variety was purchased from five different seedsmen. They were planted and cultivated under similar conditions. When just attacked the field just before the melons began to ripen. It developed rapidly and soon destroyed all the vines except those grown from the seed of one seedsmen. Many of the bins from this strain of Rockyford seed remained green throughout the season and produced a good crop of melons. Further observations in the muskmelon fields of that neighborhood also showed that wherever this strain of Rockyford seed had been used many vines were unaffected with rust, while with other strains of seed of the same variety the vines were all dead.

The investigator selected a quantity of seed from the rust-resistant hills and planted them in comparison with ordinary seed. "On the rust-resistant hills the melons were blighted under a healthy growth of vines, and were large, solidly netted, with thick, firm flesh, small seed cavity completely filled with seed. On the rusted hills the plants were almost devoid of leaves and the small melons were premature, ripe, with thin, watery flesh, open, large seed cavity, and practically of no market value."

In tracing back the history of this strain of seed it was found that some years before a seedsmen had saved the first lot from a single healthy melon taken from a field of rusted vines. It had therefore been developed by the simple process of saving seed from the best melons produced by plants which withstood attacks of rust when surrounding plants were destroyed by the disease. What was this accomplished by one farmer with one crop can probably be accomplished by other farmers with the same or with other crops, if they will be alert, while the crops are growing, to select and mark individual plants which show exceptional merit along the lines of prolific yield, early maturity, resistance to disease, or other desirable quality, and save seed separately from the plant showing such qualities. Marked variations which may be profitably utilized in this way are constantly occurring and are plainly evident on all farms.

The point to be emphasized is that improvements in farm crop varieties nearly always trace back to individual plants. No one is in better position to notice these exceptional plants than the farmer. He is in his field, garden, or orchard, every day, where these exceptional plants are produced. If one plant in a rust-infected wheat field stands up green and free from the disease, that is a plant to save seed from as the basis of a rust-resistant strain. If one hill of potatoes in a blighted field remains unaffected by disease, seed from that hill may produce a blight-resistant variety. If a squash plant is found that is distasteful to the squash bug, seed from that hill may produce squash vines which the bugs will not molest.

The important fact is that some plants are much more resistant to disease and insect attacks than others. It is a question of seeing the resistant

STYLES FOR WARM WEATHER.

Fashions for Heated Term are in Harmony with Comfort.

BY BERTHA BROWNING.

The summer fashions have become quite as settled as they are apt to during the season, and those wardrobes which are just preparing have the advantage of being exactly what is desired rather than an uncertain forecast. The woman who enjoys the cool breezes of her own veranda rather than the uncertain comforts of some other may utilize many a summer morning in fashioning pretty blouses of thin material and dainty little coats of lace or lingerie fabrics. It is the detail which makes up the fashionable wardrobe, and any woman who is clever with her fingers may make these small garments or accessories without a great deal of expense, and satisfy

PALISADE PATTERNS.

Number 6478. PRICE, 10 CENTS EACH.

A PRACTICAL APRON

Aprons are always a topic of interest to the housewife or any woman who has duties to perform as they are not only a necessary evil but a necessary good. Female and denim are usually made for aprons which must do hard general housework, no matter of gathering and this design is exactly suited to such use and development. Numerous gathered and tuckered aprons are made, but this design is the most practical and covers the front of the blouse and so shaped as to suggest the Princess effect. The fitting of the front by gathered tuckers is becoming and practical. The skirt portion offers complete protection for the skirt. Palisade, gingham or another apron material may develop the model. Four and three-fourth yards of which material are necessary in the medium sizes.

ROJESTVENSKY PLEADS GUILTY BEFORE COURT

To Save His Brother Officers—Virtually
An Appeal for Condemnation
And Death.

Cronstadt, July 4.—In a manly effort to save the surviving members of his staff, and other officers who he believed surrendered the gunboat Redova on account of their affection for their wounded commander and their desire to save his life, Admiral Rojestvensky today pleaded guilty before the court martial.

In a short speech to the court the Admiral declared that he took the entire responsibility on his own shoulders, and asked that he alone be punished to the fullest extent of the law, virtually an appeal for condemnation and death, which is the penalty of having blown St. Andrew's cross to a foreign vessel.

All the other defendants, including Captain de Vologodsky, chief of Rojestvensky's staff, and Capt. Boranoff, commander of the Redova, pleaded not guilty. After he entered his plea the taking of testimony began. Members of the crew of the Redova will be examined to determine who ordered the surrender, the condition of the vessel and the movements of the capture.

Makes The Liver Lively.

Urine becomes first step given permanent relief in cases of habitual constipation as it stimulates the liver and restores the natural action of the bowels without effort. This is done by the use of a small quantity of the medicine. It is a pleasant and reliable remedy. Woods & Lozier.

Stop Knocking.

There is no reasonable cause for a man to live in a town he don't like. If you have no word of commendation to say for your town, its institutions and people, the best thing you can do is to emigrate. The town folk will still strike the church bells and still ring out their melodies, and our pure air, bright sunshine and sparkling water will have the same health giving qualities. The flag of the true will wave over the homes of the brave and true on the Fourth, just as for the past 120 years.

Speak a good word for your town and for your neighbor, if you can, and when you can't don't enlarge on the dark side of things. But if you have become thoroughly disgruntled, take Horace Greeley's advice and "Go West, young man, and maybe you will find a place that suits you. But remember the world's pretty much the same everywhere and there are all kinds of people everywhere. It takes all kinds, you know, to make up the world."

Bowel Complaint in Children.

During the summer months children are subject to disorders of the bowels which should receive careful attention as soon as the first unmistakable looseness of the bowels appears. The best medicine in use for bowel complaint is Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, as it promptly controls any unnatural looseness of the bowels. For sale by Woods & Lozier.

A Prisoner in His Palace.

London, July 4.—The Japanese, according to the associated press correspondent at Seoul, have virtually made a prisoner of the Emperor of Korea in his own palace, by surrounding the palace with police. They claim that the step was necessary because of the constant intrigues of the Emperor.

A Hair Dressing

Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; to keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

Mr. James for Governor.

(Mayfield Messenger.)

The democratic voters in this end of the state are very anxious that our present popular Congressman, Mr. M. James, should announce himself a candidate for Governor of the state.

He can easily be nominated at the primary election, which is to be held on November 6th. After he is nominated he can carry the democratic banner victoriously by a rousing majority.

There is not a more popular man in the state today than Congressman James, from the First district. He occupies a warm place in the hearts of the people because they know him to be an honest man and will serve the people as a statesman. It is true he has again been nominated for Congress without opposition and will be elected several times hereafter, but since he is in the line of promotion and the people from all parts of the state are calling for his services in the capacity of Governor, and he should not fail to serve them as such.

Another reason that he should announce for Governor is that he lives in a democratic district, one that can and will give him the regular election of 1907 at least fifteen thousand majority. Besides, he can harmonize the democrats in many portions of the state as between the contending machines about which so much is being said.

Mr. James is too good a democrat, too wise a statesman, and a man of too fine political judgment, to become a candidate for the office of Governor tacked on to the tail of any man, be he a machine or an anti-machine candidate.

We believe now is the time for Mr. James to become a candidate for Governor, free from all alliances with other candidates, but as a free man, before a free people. Mr. James we hope will let the people hear from him at once on this important question.

MAJOR GENERAL WOOD.

His Rapid Rise in the Army and Brave Record.

Major General Leonard Wood, who has been criticized on account of the attack upon the Moros in the battle of Mount Dajo, has had a remarkable career, and his rapid promotion in the army has made for him many enemies. His advancement to the rank of brigadier general in the regular army by President McKinley aroused much criticism, and when President Roosevelt advanced him to the major general's rank the hostile comments broke out afresh. General Wood is not a graduate of West Point and was a surgeon in the army at the beginning of the

MAJOR GENERAL LEONARD WOOD.

Spanish war, when he organized and assumed command of the famous regiment of rough riders in which President Roosevelt was lieutenant colonel. General Wood holds a congressional medal of honor which was awarded him for bravery in a campaign against Apaches. His career is a notable illustration of the pluck of fortune. An old friend of General Wood once said: "Some time in the fall of 1897 I don't recall the exact date—I received a letter from General Wood. He would not say that he was thinking strongly of making a trip into the Klondike country, which was then the sensation of the hour. The exact wording escapes me, but the inference was that the future looked rather blank—in short, that he would have to do something then, if ever, and the Klondike seemed to offer a chance. In less than four months after getting this dependent letter the Yukon was destroyed, and the circumstances were in motion that were destined to put a general's stars on the back of his shoulder straps, and surfeit him with glory. If he had made the necessary arrangements in 1897 I dare say he would be sitting to day in a miner's cabin."

OFFICER AND HEIRESS.

Romance of Lieutenant Scharrar and His Young Bride.

Love bravery and beer formed a most unusual combination in the case of the beautiful Miss Wilhelmina Busch and the gallant Lieutenant Edward P. Scharrar. The lieutenant is an officer of the German army. The girl with whom he fell in love is the daughter of the millionaire brewer, Adolphus Busch of St. Louis. He was an ardent wooer and it is said had proposed several times previous to the memorable day on which he took the brewer's daughter on a ride to Belleville, a suburb of St. Louis. She had not said "yes" before, but on this day he was particularly ardent and suggested marriage on the spot. They went to a hotel, and the would-be bridegroom wrote on the register "Mr. and Mrs. Edward Scharrar." How ever, no marriage took place at that time. While he was trying to arrange for one the young lady in the case called up her father by telephone, and he put in a protest, as the result of which they both returned to St. Louis without being married. Then the daughter was picked off in haste to the California home of the family at Pasadena. There followed a race across half the continent between the lieutenant and the more or less perturbed parent. Papa Busch took a special train, but the young officer got there first and persuaded the fair Wilhelmina to permit a second attempt at matrimony to be made. The marriage was duly consummated.

Wouldn't Survive It.

La Crosse, Wis., June 27.—Gene Hickey, who bore the record of being the fastest hand binder in Wisconsin, yesterday knotted his last bundle when he deliberately tied a heavy twine about his neck, looped the other end to the bedpost and lay down to strangle to death. Hickey was 60 years old, and had traveled behind a scythe in every part of the northwest. The death of his wife and disagreements with his two stepsons, over whom he was guardian, is believed to have led to the prolonged debauch which finally ended in the suicide.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

The North Pole Polar

Bruin was ambitious, and, like many of us, his ambition was always getting him into trouble. He was a polar bear and lived amid the ice and snows of the far north. One day, overhearing a conversation between two Arctic explorers, he said to himself, for he usually talked to himself, not being able to get any one else to listen to him: "I wonder if I couldn't find that north pole they talk so much about. Here those fellows come from way off to the south and freeze most of themselves and starve the rest to find something that must be floating around some up here, where I've lived all my days. My jinks, I'll find it!"

For days he wandered on in his uncertain search until one day he saw in the distance something sticking out of the water that he was sure was the north pole. "It's a pole anyway," he said to himself, "and I'm sure it's far enough north to be a north pole. I shall be famous if I find what all these men have been looking for so long."

So he crawled along the ice to where a ship had foundered and left one of its masts sticking out of the water.

"That's it!" cried Bruin eagerly. "At last I have it! I shall hold it fast some day soon!"

So he climbed to the top.

But no one came, of course.

"This, dear," thought he, "how long shall I have to wait for some one to tell my discovery to? This is getting tiresome."

Yes, and it was getting dangerous for the ice drifted away and left him stranded. For all I know, he's there yet.

"Good gracious!" said he. "What's the use of finding a thing you can't take home to show any one?"

"That's true. What is the use?" St. Louis Post Dispatch.

CHAPPEL HILL.

Everything is progressing in this place since the rains.

Wheat all in the stack and a threshing machine, our gold is expected to be good.

The hay crop has come out much better since the rains, but not more than half a crop is promised.

Corn in this neighborhood is up to an average crop. It is all about paraded over the last time.

The tobacco crop is about an average in this precinct, and looks well, some patches nearly large enough to top.

Mr. and Mrs. John Astabide, from Kelsey, made a flying trip through this section last week and took dinner with W. H. Bigham and visited the I. B. Hodges place with a view of making a change in their location.
